MRS. M. PECK HAS GAINED 25 POUNDS

Nine Years' Troubled Ends, And She Is Well and Happy Now.

"I have gained twenty-five pounds since I commenced taking Tanlac, and the troubles which have been making life miserable for me for nine years have been completely overcome," said Mrs. Minnie Peck, who lives at 2874, 52nd Ave., Edmonton, the other day.

"When I commenced taking Tanlac," continued Mrs. Peck, "I was so weak and run down that I was hardly able to get about. Everything I ate disagreed with me, and I would suffer for two or three hours after every meal on account of gas forming and bloating me up. I would have severe cramping pains in the pit of my stomach. I was very nervous, so much that the slamming of a door would upset me terribly, and a good night's sleep was out of the question for me. I would actually get out of bed every morning feeling more tired and worn out than I did the night before. This condition kept getting worse all the time until I got to where I was compelled to stay in bed most of the time."

"Then I decided to give Tanlac a trial, and it's the honest truth, I commenced to feel better before I had finished my first bottle of the wonderful medicine, and my condition just kept getting better until I am now as well as ever I was in my life. I never have a sign of stomach trouble now, and I have a fine appetite and eat just anything I want. I have gotten back my strength and can easily do all my household work. My nerves are in perfect condition, and I sleep like a child every night. It is simply wonderful the way I have gained in weight and, in fact, I just feel fine all the time. Yes, sir, Tanlac is a wonderful medicine, and as long as I live I will never lose an opportunity to say a good word for it."

Tanlac is sold in Red Deer by Gaetz-Corsett Drug & Book Co., in Stettin by the Palace Pharmacy, Ltd., in Eekville by Eekville Drug Co., in Veteran by Veteran Drug Store, in Debonaire by E. J. Hogge, and in Heppner by Macdonnell Bros.

WHY A FORWARD MOVEMENT?

The great war is over, and victory is ours; but can it be truly said that the world is at peace, when these outbreaks of lawlessness and anarchy, that are now so prevalent throughout the world, threaten to become an even greater evil than the Prussianism we have defeated?

"It is now generally recognized that the ultimate causes which produced the world war were moral and spiritual in character, therefore the remedies for the evils now threatening the world should be both moral and spiritual. Here then is the opportunity for a great onward movement of the church, which should take a leading part in this great reconstruction period."

And, seeing that the world's future depends mainly upon those peoples which are British in origin, or have adopted British traditions, and that the important place and strategic position of Canada within the British Empire links up its destinies with international questions and relationships of a world-wide order, it is incumbent upon the church in Canada to do its share.

In order, therefore, that the church in Canada may become efficient for this great work the Forward Movement has as its objectives:

- (a) The instant reassertion and proclamation of the spiritual values and issues of life.
- (b) The enlistment of men for the ministry and of both men and women for other forms of active Christian service.
- (c) A great awakening of the spirit and practice of Christian stewardship, thereby securing the means for an adequate maintenance of church workers, and the equipment necessary to enable them to carry on their work.

ROSEBUD DIS. Y.M.C.A.

At a meeting of the directors of the Rosebud District Y.M.C.A., at Olds on Monday, January 12th, unanimous invitation was extended to Frank Paulding to become general secretary. Through the territorial secretary, C. D. Thornton, of Vancouver, a committee has been communicating with Mr. Paulding, and he was present at the meeting. Mr. Paulding assumed his new duties at once, and he is already on the job as secretary of the first County Y.M.C.A. organized in Alberta.

Mr. Paulding has the distinction of being the last Canadian Y.M.C.A. officer overseas. He only recently returned after having been in charge of the hat at Buxton, which was the last Y.M.C.A. hat sent overseas.

Paulding left Revelstoke, where he was the manager of the Multi-Herd, early in 1917, and has been in the Y.M.C.A. service ever since. He was on the Canadian liner "Luconia" when she was torpedoed in February, 1917. He had a narrow escape and lost all his baggage. Seven people died from exposure on the raft from which he was rescued the next morning by a British destroyer. He himself was ill for some time after the experience.

On arriving in England he served for six months at the Granville Hospital, Ramsgate, as a Canadian volunteer to the British Y.M.C.A. He then transferred to the Canadian Y.M.C.A., and was put in charge of the St. Marks Horton (Hortons) work, and yet later transferred to Sandgate, where he ran a Y.M.C.A. theatre. He was then removed to take charge of the Laidlaw Millen hut which was built by John W. Ross, of Montreal, as a memorial at Shorecliffe. While there he was business manager and later acting supervisor for the Y.M.C.A. He was slated for service in France when the armistice intervened. Throughout his whole Y.M.C.A. career Mr. Paulding has been eminently successful, and will no doubt make a most efficient general secretary for the Rosebud District Association.

CANADA IS READY FOR INFLUENZA

Machinery All Set for Possible Recurrence of the Disease.

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—The following statement was issued here by the federal department of health:

"While the department of health has as yet no information of the recurrence of the influenza epidemic in any part of Canada, the report of new cases in Chicago means that the people of Canada must face the possibility of a return of the epidemic. In view of this possibility the department of health is keeping in close touch with the United States public health service and is receiving full information of the progress of the disease there and of the methods found valuable in the United States toward relieving the disease and combating the epidemic."

The Dominion Council of Health at its meeting in October, 1919, thoroughly discussed the matter and mapped out a campaign to be carried out in case of the return of the disease in Canada, and all the provincial boards of health have been notified and are preparing for eventualities. These preparations include provision for rapid expansion hospital facilities, registration of all available nurses, emergency training of volunteers, and registration of volunteer home workers."

MUCH MONEY TO BE ASKED FOR IRRIGATION PLAN

Northern Lethbridge Scheme Will Involve An Outlay of $5,000,000.

Edmonton, January 21.—Big money, incidentally more than was at first expected, will be involved in the irrigation schemes which the Alberta legislature will be asked to approve. George Anderson, the California irrigation expert, who was engaged by the government to make a survey of the northern Lethbridge project, has completed his report, and it is now in the hands of the cabinet ministers. Anderson has returned to Lethbridge and will take up various other local phases of the scheme between now and the month of March.

The report shows that while the northern Lethbridge scheme will mean an expenditure of about $5,000,000, there is an available water supply sufficient to involve ultimately an outlay of $20,000,000 on southern Alberta irrigation. It is the conviction of the government that the work will not be done, but only commenced, when the original Lethbridge scheme is provided, and the ultimate outlay is what will call for careful consideration when the house meets.

It is the intention of the government to base upon the survey report a recommendation to the legislature and the whole matter will then be discussed in detail, with a view to giving a definite answer to the Lethbridge people.

BRITISH POLICY AND PROHIBITION

Imperial considerations demand that there be the closest sympathy between the British people in Britain and in the overseas Dominions. A real and fundamental cleavage on such an issue as prohibition would be most unfortunate. It is most important that Canadian Prohibitionists should understand that the British policy is far from being purely negative.

Mr. Lloyd George recently addressing an important deputation from the Universities including the leaders in surgery and medicine said that the government was determined to secure effective control over the liquor trade. Legislation is in the hands of Mr. Hal Fisher whose work on the education law has wrought a national transformation. The proposals offered by the liquor trade are not favored.

In view of our own history it is noteworthy that the government has already issued to all normal schools a text book so prepared that teachers will instill into the minds of the present school generation a scientific understanding of the nature and effects of alcohol. The Scientific Bureau is also to study by observation the actual results of the more far-reaching legislation in other countries, whether on this continent or elsewhere. The accumulation of such information scientifically ascertained can have only one result.

THE NEW YEOMEN OF ENGLAND

FARMERS SUCCEEDING THE FEUDAL LORDS

By W. Beach Thomas, in London Mail.

In a previous article I wrote of the last of the feudal lords. His place is taken by the yeoman farmer, who is the biggest landlord today in the British Isles—much the biggest.

I know a single farmer in East Angles—he is a direct descendant of one of "Coke of Norfolk's" farmers—who has bought the better part of his 5,000 acres of which he was tenant. A neighboring farmer, who owns one of the best partridge shoots in England, has bought only 300 acres, but those are "the eyes of the farm"—and herein lies one of the essentials of the new condition.

Of the millions of acres sold a huge proportion is the best land, and the hereditary landlord is left only with the worst. The Government and the farmers between them have taken the best.

One of the few estates I know untouched by the main for sale is in Hampshire and consists of heavy clay land, rented at about 10s. an acre. The income from the whole estate is minus rent only about £250 a year, though in 1870 or so it was valued at some £60,000. We are bound to ask the question: Will the yeoman farmer be a good landlord? Will he keep up his buildings, and clean his ditches, and stiffen

ANOTHER VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM

Entirely Well After Six Weeks' Treatment With "FRUIT-A-LIVES"

MR. AMDECE GARCEAU
32 Hickory St., Ottawa, Ont.

"I was for many years a victim of that terrible disease, Rheumatism. In 1918, I was laid up for four months with Rheumatism in the joints of the knees, hips and shoulders and was prevented from following my work, that of Electrician."

I tried many remedies and was under the care of a physician; but nothing did me any good. Then I began to take 'Fruit-a-lives' and in a week I was easier, and in six weeks I was so well I went to work again.

I look upon this fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-lives', as simply marvellous in the cure of Rheumatism, and strongly advise everyone suffering with Rheumatism to give 'Fruit-a-lives' a trial."

his hinges, and be generous to his cottagers?"

He is a very powerful person, and knows it for the first time. The farmers' union, which will soon boast 100,000 members at least, is stronger than most trade unions. It is forcing out of the Government a stiff measure of fifty per cent, so that soon the tenant farmer will be a half-owner and a system of dual ownership will be established.

The farmer is powerful, and must look to it that he does not misuse his powers. The other day in Leicestershire farmers broke up an auction and violently arrested a sale because the tenants on an estate had not been given first choice of purchase. If this is not direct action, what is?

I have come across not one or two instances where farmers have accepted of the favourable terms offered by their landlords and at once resold at good profit to land speculators. In one case the rental was already arranged before the landlord had granted the tenant the privilege of buying. Farmers on their own behalf must take precautions against this sort of action. If it becomes common their reputation is gone, and the public will not permit them to receive such privileges as a minimum price for grain. Their reputation is at stake.

The farmer is taking the landlord's place in more than the mere ownership of the acres. Wherever I have been I have found farmers preparing to take over the shooting. A good many, of course, let it as a common price for partridge land is 2s. 6d. an acre—and are too busy with their new machines and labour-saving plans to have much leisure. For farmers are working much harder than they have ever worked.

But the sporting farmer prevails nevertheless; and the person and the landlord and the country gentleman, glad to accept invitations—I speak of a particular experience in the Eastern Midlands—to shoot and lunch with him and carry away their loads of birds. That picture of the titled person carrying off the gift of birds from the farmer speaks volumes.

The social change is following the economic change, and it is to the good or it will be to the good if the farmer clings to the land and his yeomanship. If he yields to the seduction of the land speculator, all will be to the bad. A country dominated by the war profiteer would be an example of desperate reaction. And it is a question in the balance: Is the successor to the feudal lord to be the farmer or the syndicate and the profiteer?

CAPETOWN AND CAIRO LINKED
BY AIR SERVICE

London, January 22.—Cairo and Capetown, representing the extreme of the African continent, have at last been linked up by an air service. The British air ministry has announced that an air route, over which engineers have spent long months of labor amidst great difficulties, is finally ready for traffic. This means that the time heretofore required to traverse the continent—from 10 to 12 weeks—has now been cut down to about one week, and that heretofore secluded sections of Africa will be opened up to the world.

The total distance by the old method of communication is 6,233 miles for which 10 to 12 days would be required. Against this, the air ministry points out, the total flying distance of the aerial route should not exceed 5,200 miles. Taking 100 miles an hour as a fair route average flying speed, only 52 hours actual flying time would be required to cover the distance or about a week flying eight hours a day.

OUR NATIONAL

The following interesting extract from an article by Mr. E. W. F. Barry, president of the C. P. R., appeared recently in the Montreal Gazette:

"So much for the manner in which the transportation machinery of the country is carrying out its obligations to the Canadian producer."

Other aspects of the transportation problem are less satisfactory. There are many people who look upon Canadian Railways as custodians of magic fortunes which cannot be exhausted.

CONFIDENT TEMPERANCE. Conducted by Miss Myrtle Flumerfelt, B.A.

ALCOHOL AND THE WILL.

The following paragraphs are excerpted from "Alcohol and the Human Race," by Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson.

The will more than any other power of the mind determines the character and fate of the individual as well as his influence upon society. Alcohol in attacking the "temple" strikes at the will, the "spirit." Since will is the highest, most delicate and complex power of the mind, the latest evolved, an injury to the integrity of the brain by such a poison necessarily produces its maximum of harm to the will.

The exercise of the will requires and presupposes memory. As pointed out above, memory is quickened by the action of alcohol on the nerve cells and connections. It was there stated that memory declines in an inverse order of age, even as the faculties of the body decline. Consequently, in an alcoholic, the sense of ideals will gradually contract to those of youth or even childhood, until the only end and purpose remaining are those which center upon gratification of appetite and the satisfaction of the senses. It is vain to expect the victim to become constant of high ideals, of love, duty, home, country, God.

Furthermore, the normal act of willing is preceded by an intellectual process of deliberation, requiring voluntary attention and conscious judgment, and reasoning. As the power of voluntary control of the mental processes declines, and the will is weakened, the individual is unable to resist the impulses of the senses, and the mind is disintegrated. The loss of voluntary control has as one of its results the decline, first of ideas, then of feelings, lastly of muscles.

The exercise of the will in volition requires the generation of nerve energy, as well as the discharge of energy in the particular channels decided upon by reason. The poisoning effect of alcohol must only take away progressively the power to control and discharge nervous energy, but impairs the very power to generate it, and breaks down the faculty of judgment by which the energy would be directed into proper channels. At certain stages of alcoholism, the individual is unable to recognize what he should do and may try his best to control his habit and conduct, but all in vain. The fatigue caused by the poison makes it impossible to generate sufficient nerve energy for effective volition and will power.

In the light of the poisoning effect of alcohol on the brain, the disintegration of the physical basis of the capacities which compose the will and the reason, it is futile to talk of self-control and temperance to confirmed drinkers. Self-control and temperance are ideal only for the man for by men at all times. The alcoholic has not the power to strive even when he has the desire. The only alternative is to seek to regulate the poison, and thus, as a public policy, the complete prohibition of the sale of alcoholic beverages is the only sane and effective method of dealing with the problem.

If we recall that under regular, controlled drinking, even though "temperance" memory is impaired, and the sense of thought, of judgment, of purpose, instead of expanding, is contracting, and that the intellectual processes of deliberation, of judgment, of concentration and reasoning steadily weaken while action springs impulsively from the brain, it is not surprising that the physical basis of the capacities which compose the will and the reason, it is futile to talk of self-control and temperance to confirmed drinkers.

KNOX CHURCH SESSION

The session of Knox Church makes its annual meeting an event. This year the rendezvous was the home of the clerk, Mr. W. B. Ellwood. The McFarlane Bros. provided the horsed'power, Mr. A. H. Hopworth acting as pilot. This is one of the times when the id is off the wit of the senior elder, Mr. John McVear. On the program the session was a musical change of the fog horn; an occasional dip into the ditch made the ladies forget that they were at a church session. The session was called out that he sighted the beacon light on the gale. The next stage was a fine supper at Mrs. Ellwood and her daughters, Margaret and Blanche had all ready, and to see their elders and their wives eat can be better left to the imagination than described. The session is one body of men whose annual meeting is both enjoyable and profitable.

At the meeting proper, it was decided to ask the congregation to elect additional elders and stewards. Appreciation of the life and work of the late Mr. John White, for years a member of the session, was put on record.

The statistical side of the work showed that during the year five members had been removed by death, nine by certificate, and twenty names were placed on the appendix to the roll because of over three years absence. Twenty-four had been added to the roll of members leaving the new membership at the close of the year at 216. The declining of the spiritual life of the people and the opportunity of the Forward Movement received the most serious consideration of the session. The sincere thanks of the session and the ladies to Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood and finally for their fine hospitality were shared in by all present, and the trip home was finished a good while after the orthodox elders' hours.

NAZARENE SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFICERS

The annual Sunday School Board meeting of the Nazarene Church, Red Deer, was held at the home of Mrs. E. Snyder on Monday evening, Jan. 21. After all reports were given and accepted, the following officers and teachers were elected for the year:—Asst. Superintendent—E. Snyder. Bible Class Teacher—Geo. Shelton. Young People's Class Teacher—H. P. McNeill. Intermediate Boys' Class—L. McLean. Intermediate Girls' Class—Mrs. Kitchell. Primary Class Teacher—Mrs. Chas. White. Secy-Treas.—Ruby Kitchell. Organist—Mrs. Kitchell. Librarian—Harold Hugel. The hour of Sunday School is from 10 to 11 a.m., and a hearty invitation is given to all to attend these classes. With the help of the Lord, we intend to make our Sunday School a real live one, giving special attention to the spiritual standing of the little folks. Send them along, we will take care of them, and ever point them out the way of the Cross, for upon it did Jesus shed his blood, and we must be set free from all sin. He also said "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Will you do it? Wm. Anthony, Superintendent.

ABOUT YOUR CHILBLAINS!

What are they? A mild form of frost-bite—a chilling of the part to such a degree that inflammation is set up, causing a tingling pain, excessive irritation and a swelling. Tam-Buk cures chilblains by relieving the inflammation, ending the pain and irritation, and reducing the swelling.

Miss Annie Lepard of Beaverdam, Ont., says: "I suffered agonizing chilblains and used many remedies, but nothing gave me any ease until I used Tam-Buk, which, after a little perseverance, completely rid me of this painful ailment."

Regular applications of Tam-Buk will prevent a recurrence of the trouble. Keep it handy. 60c. box.

1870 Our Golden Jubilee 1920
Congratulations!

To the Policyholders of the Mutual Life of Canada,

GREETING:—

It is with great pleasure that we, the members of your Board of Directors, extend to you our heartiest congratulations on this the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Establishment of our Company.

While feeling gratified on account of the financial strength of the Company with its assets of over $36,000,000, and more than $160,000,000 of Assurances in force, let us not forget the men who first became advocates of the Mutual principle in life insurance. They deserve our gratitude for their sacrifice, devotion and foresight which have brought the benefit of Mutual Life Insurance to thousands of Canadian homes.

Great as have been the achievements of the Mutual, the future years, we are sure, hold promise of even greater usefulness. The pioneers of the Mutual were the sowers, and we are now harvesting the results of their disinterested labors.

Signed on behalf of the Board of Directors,

E. P. CLEMENT,
President.

THE QUEEN'S LAST RIDE.

(Written on the day of Queen Victoria's funeral, by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.)

The Queen is taking a drive today; They have hung with purple the carriage-way; They have dressed with purple the royal track Where the Queen goes forth and never comes back.

Let no man labour as she goes by On her last appearance to mortal eye; We roads uncovered let all men For the Queen to pass, in her regal stride.

Army and Navy shall lead the way For that wonderful coach of the Queen's today; Kings and Princes and Lords of the land Shall ride behind her, an humble band; And over the city and over the world Shall the flags of all nations be half-mast furled; For the silent lady of royal birth Who is riding away from the courts of earth, Riding away from the world's unrest To a mystical goal, on a secret quest.

Though in royal splendour she drives through town Her robes are simple she wears no crown; And yet she wears one; for, widowed no more, She is crowned with the love that has gone before. And crowned with the love she has left behind In the hidden depths of each mourner's mind.

How low your heads—lift your hearts on high— The Queen in silence is driving by!

RED DEER BRANCH: J. M. CAMPBELL, MANAGER

"Most furniture factories are over-sold for from six to twelve months and most dealers are crying for furniture. Only those with foresight will have sufficient furniture on hand to run them the winter. Those with small stocks must increase prices by spring or quit business."

The family in need of furniture will not be able to buy it any cheaper than now unless it desires to wait three to five years for normal conditions in the furniture industry."

—Grand Rapids Furniture Record

The cutting printed above gives an idea of the prospects of the furniture trade for the future.

Fortunately, owing to our heavy buying last year—and we bought more goods in the last twelve months than we did in any previous eighteen—we are in a position to sell at last year's prices.

We are still receiving goods which we ordered last spring; and have just received a large consignment of Carpets ordered in May last at 15 per cent. under present prices.

If you want anything for the home we advise you to buy it now; as it will cost you more when the existing stocks are exhausted.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1920.

A PECULIAR POSITION.

Vernon, B.C., News.—It is doubtful if any city in British Columbia ever faced a more awkward and more humiliating position than that which now confronts Vernon by reason of the fiasco in connection with civic nominations. Due entirely to the apathy and negligence of our citizens, not a single member was nominated for the City Council or Board of Police Commissioners on the day set apart for this purpose, with the result that the Mayor, Aldermen and Commissioners have sent in their resignations, and the town is now without a governing body.

Last week we expressed the hope that the Council of 1919 might be induced to retain office for another year, or at least that a majority of them could be persuaded to do so. In which case, under the provisions of the Municipal Act, they could have filled any vacancies on the Board by appointment. We still believe that, in the interests of the city, this would have been the best solution of the problem, and perhaps it might have been reached had the Mayor and Aldermen, even at that late hour received any evidence that this was the desire of the citizens. But the fact remains that no effort was made, except that put forth by The News, to express any appreciation of their arduous duties, well and faithfully rendered the city, or to request that they again allow their names to be placed in nomination. Palling any such expression of public sentiment, it is not surprising that they have decided to resign. Self-respecting men could hardly do otherwise.

WASHINGTON'S ATTITUDE.

The Vancouver Daily Sun comments upon recent developments at Washington regarding the Peace Treaty as follows:

"A curious performance indeed is the resolution by which the Republican senators in the United States propose to declare the war at an end. Its basis is the assumption that our countrymen are a law to themselves in the world and that the interests of other nations are not to be considered."

"In brief, all the benefits conferred on the United States by the treaty are to be retained, while all the obligations are to be repudiated. A separate arrangement—not to be called a treaty but really to be one—is to be made with Germany, and the other nations are practically to guarantee its fulfillment."

"Of course this nice little scheme is still a long way from being carried into effect. It involves incidentally permitting the senate to take away some of the powers of the President but this is something not so easy of accomplishment with a man like Woodrow Wilson in the presidential chair. Meantime, while the peace of the world is thus being made the friends of Yankee politics, Great Britain and France are being compelled to go ahead without the assistance of our neighbors. Some sort of recovery, for instance, has to be provided for Turkey. If the United States will not undertake this duty, somewhat else must."

LOW MORTALITY AND HAIR NETS

Kingston British Whig: Add to list of fashions of hair nets. Stores handling this feminine necessity are most down to the last net, and there's no relief in sight.

According to wholesalers, the short age is caused by the decline in the death rate in China. Nets sold in America are virtually all made from Chinese hair, the bulk of which is obtained from the hair of dead Chinese. The big shortage is in dark brown and black nets. Women have been forced to buy white or grey hair nets and dye them.

A SUDDEN CALL

Mme. P. Buisseret took a stroke of paralysis at Mme. LeSauter's residence on Wednesday at 5:45 p.m. and died at the Memorial Hospital six hours later. Mrs. Buisseret had been living with her daughter, Mrs. F. Michel, North Red Deer, but, as they were moving, Mrs. Buisseret went over to stay with Mme. LeSauter for a day or two. She was expecting the arrival of Mr. Buisseret any day from Montreal. Mr. and Mrs. Buisseret lived in North Red Deer for some years, returning to Montreal three years ago. It was their intention to again live at Red Deer. Mrs. Buisseret was of Belgian birth, and was 55 years of age. Her only child in the country is Mrs. Michel, who will have sincere sympathy in the sudden call of her mother.

ALWAYS A LIMIT

A certain woman was so painfully neat that she made life wretched for her family. One of her rules was that all members of the household must remove their shoes before entering the house.

"Bill," she whined one day to her husband, "I found a grease spot on one of the dining-room chairs, and I think it came off those pants you wear in the shop."

"Well, Mirandy," shouted Bill, his patience exhausted, "for the last 15 years I've taken my shoes off every time I come into this house, but I'll be hanged if I'm going to go any further."

MANAGER MUNN'S REMOVAL

Wainwright Star.—It is with regret that we have to report that the manager of the local branch of the Merchants Bank is going to leave Wainwright. Mr. Munn has held the position of manager of the local bank for five years and has, in that time, established for himself an enviable reputation. Mr. Munn's promotion will give him the opportunity of living in one of Alberta's prettiest towns. Red Deer, for it certainly has the reputation of being one of the loveliest spots in the C. and E. line. Red Deer has five banks in business. C. H. Rowe, of the Telford branch of the Merchant's bank, will take Mr. Munn's position here.

EXAMINER'S REVIEW OF PROVINCIAL MARKETS

Cattle.

Beef is, generally speaking, about a half a dollar lower in Calgary this week, with the receipts very light up to the last few days when there have been some fairly good lots of steers and cows. Top steers are from $10.50 to $11.50, and the best cows from $8.50 to $9.50. Unfavorable weather has kept the demand for feeders and stocker cattle very light, and as nobody wants to buy them until they see how long the present weather will last.

Hogs.

Buyers at Calgary have been edging hogs and Wednesday and Thursday were paying $18. Receipts have been good and today's offerings brought $18.00.

Horses.

Big auction sales in Calgary during the week and prices on the good horses firm and unchanged. There is a good demand for the medium to heavy horses, broken or unbroken.

Grain.

Little has occurred during the week to cause movement in the grain prices, though barley has been strong at times. Oats will depend to some extent on export sales, which are expected to develop later on.

Produce.

Cold weather and storms of more or less severity have checked the movement of farm produce, and coming at a season when there is not very much to forward it has reduced receipts to a very small quantity. Dairy butter continues to be somewhat indifferent and the straight receipt stock is not very popular, quoted from 40c to 45c, though good table butter keeps up. Creamery butter firm. Cream receipts are lower: prices unchanged, but there may be a reduction within a few weeks. Very little poultry marketed.

Hay.

Big rush for hay during the week and prices firm, with country points sales of hay at from $35 down for No. 1 hay at favorable shipping points; Creamery hay from $25 to $32. Green feed in demand and prices from $20 down.

SERIES OF MEETINGS POSTPONED

On account of the extreme cold making it almost impossible for man or beast to go any distance, the series of meetings in the district west of Red Deer arranged by the Rev. W. G. Brown, will be postponed for the present. Definite announcement of these will be made at a later date. Will the friends in the several districts make this postponement as widely known as possible.

POPLAR RIDGE NEWS

G. O. Staples is reported on the sick list; also Mrs. Finch. We wish them a speedy recovery.

DeFauw Bros. have bought F. Collins' sawing outfit and are now prepared to serve the public.

John Peterson, of Crossroads, was visiting the burg on Sunday last.

Miss Vera Austin is home from the hospital after a two weeks stay there. We are glad to have her back again.

L. Austin has removed his sawing outfit to the north end of Sylvan Lake. He expects to cut about 300,000 feet of lumber if all goes well.

Rev. Grigg has started conducting services alternately at Poplar Ridge and Crossroads. The next service will be at the former place at the usual time, 3:30 p.m.

TOO COMMON PHENOMENON

A medical paper advances the theory that "man is slightly taller in the morning than he is in the evening." We have never tested this, but we have certainly noticed a tendency to become "short" towards the end of the month.

EFFICIENT TREATMENT.

"Do you guarantee results in your nerve treatment?" asked the Collier. "You bet I do," replied the Specialist. "Why, last week a man came to me for nerve treatment and when I got through with him he tried to borrow $500 from me."

NOTICE.

Applications will be received from farmers in Alberta for loans under the Live Stock Encouragement Act for the purchase of cows during the year 1920 up to April 30th of this year. It being decided to handle applications coming from many parts of the province at different times of the year, it has been decided to limit the applications to the first four months. Farmers interested will kindly govern themselves accordingly and get all their applications in to the Live Stock Commissioner before April 30th, 1920.

Recollections of the Old Survey Days

During the summer of 1881, we were locating and running trail lines for the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway along Nosbunung Lake and down the Vase Creek towards Lake Nipissing. A Mr. Hogan was in charge of the party, that gentleman for work. Mr. E. J. Duchesnay was transman, and Emile Teta leveler. At that time there was but one settler on Nosbunung Lake, and that fishing there was in it.

While we were camped along the lake we used a lumberman's red boat to take us to and from our work, when we invariably traveled with a hand line and common spoon.

I recollect while rowing to work one morning, Duchesnay traveled, and looking on. Suddenly there was a tremendous tug at the line. Uttering an exclamation Duchesnay began hauling it in, but it was no easy matter. "Twas evident he had hooked a big one. Fortunately, however, the line was a stout one and the fish securely caught. After a brief and desperate struggle on the part of the fish, he was brought alongside of the boat. The question then was, how to get him on board? For we had neither gaff nor landing-net. At his belt, Duchesnay carried a next little 32 calibre Smith and Wesson revolver.

A brilliant idea occurred to me. "Shoot it, Mr. Duchesnay," I called out. Promptly acting on my suggestion, at a range of a couple of feet or so, he broke his back with a bullet, killing him immediately and making a mark of thirty-two lbs. weight weighed on our return to camp in the evening was lifted into the boat without any trouble.

The following Sunday morning, Duchesnay and I took a bark canoe and went trawling. We had but one line and took it turn about to fish and puddle. I do not recollect how many we caught, but I do remember that after fishing, for only a portion of the morning, we brought back to camp more black bass and doré than the whole party of about twenty-two healthy men could eat, before a good part of the catch went bad and had to be thrown away.

I do not know how many settlers may now be living about the lake, or how much fishing has been done since those days, but unless it has been much fished it should still well repay a visit of any enthusiastic disciples of the gentle art.

Recollect we had but one common, large red and silver spoon. How the fish must have swarmed in the lake, then. What sport might not expert fishermen have today, with rods and proper tackle? Where could they find finer camping grounds either, or proper, wild scenery of lake and woods?

When we had left the lake a few miles with our survey and got into the undulating built country along the Vase Creek. What a paradise that country was for sportsmen, then before its world old silence had been disturbed by the locomotive's whistle. Alas, hear, boys, Yabson said. Never a day passed that we did not see fresh tracks of them. The bear and fox we never saw. But the animals are more shy or wary? A moose occasionally we did.

One day while running the line along a side hill, in the open built country, we saw six magnificent moose, of course, no rifle was ever carried on the line and we could only watch them trot away. What strides they took with what ease they negotiated fallen timber!

It was about mid-summer, if I remember rightly, of that year 1881 somewhere along the Vase. We had gone out to work as usual, I was a man on that survey; that morning, however, one of the chains was laid off, for sickness, or something, and I was told to fill his place.

As usual, that morning, Duchesnay set up his transit, and as usual the axemen lolled about, lighted their pipes, or gave a final touch with whistlers to their axes, while they waited for line. In a few moments the transit was in readiness and Duchesnay turned to me.

"Get a good stout four by four inch, four foot dry stake, like a hub-stake, blaze it like a hub-stake, and mark on it with red keel, in big letters, 'C.P.R. Station O.' From now on this line will be known as The Canadian Pacific Railway, not The Canada Central." He turned to the axemen and said, "All right, boys, stick up a picket and get line now."

Thus I had the distinction of marking and driving in the first station stake marked, C.P.R.

I think there is a station now somewhere about there, called Calender.

and it was what a man really was that counted and not what he thought he was even said he was. In the survey measured the mass accordingly, and let me tell you they have learned from these lessons, and as they become adjusted to civil life, my opinion is that they will not forget them in a hurry and neither will you or I be able to put them back into the old grooves again."

ALBERTA ASPHALT AND TAR FIELDS TO BE DEVELOPED

Plans are under consideration for the extensive development of Alberta's untapped industry of tar and asphalt, which will mean a marked increase in the brisqueting industry of the province. Hon. Charles Stewart, premier of Alberta, made statements to this effect on Tuesday in speaking with a representative of the Fraser Stewart also stated, that Alberta coal would soon supplant the 3,000,000 tons of anthracite imported annually by Western Canada.

Premier Stewart was asked with regard to the possibility of Alberta increasing the output of briquettes. BRIQUETTE PLANT FOR EDMONTON.

"Not long ago," Premier Stewart said, "two capitalists from Chicago interviewed the government with regard to the extraction of tar deposits on thousands of acres at Port McMurray. They sought assurance of transportation facilities to Edmonton, where it was planned to erect a large briquetting plant. They were advised that the government would be willing to help by assisting transportation through the waterways from Port McMurray to Edmonton."

TRIED TO BITE HIM.

Apocryph of the fact that kissing is unknown in Japan, Elford Howard in his entertaining book "Japanese Memories," tells an amusing story. During the Russo-Japanese war, (writes the author) to the astonishment of a Jap commander, one of the soldiers brought into his presence a Russian prisoner whose hands were bound.

"What has the prisoner done to deserve this treatment?" asked the officer.

"Sir," was the reply, "he tried to bite me."

The explanation was that the prisoner, in order to show his gratitude for some food and cigarettes given him by his captor, had attempted to kiss him.

ANNUAL MEETING OF KNOX CHURCH

In spite of the severe cold, there was a good attendance at the annual meeting of Knox Church on Wednesday evening. The reports were presented by the officers and a lot of good work had been done, and the congregation expressed its appreciation of the work and the workers. The financial statements of the treasurer of the church, the Ladies' Aid, the Women's Missionary Society, and the Sabbath School, showed in these departments a substantial increase over preceding year, the Ladies' Aid raising over $1,000, and the budget of the church being about $5,700. The missionary budget was a little over $600, and it was felt by the church that this was not enough in view of the present call to missionary service.

It was agreed by all that every member and adherent of the church in town and country should give practical recognition of their share in the maintenance of the work of the church. The board had taken upon itself during the year to increase the minister's salary, and this action was endorsed by the congregation. It was decided to increase the number of managers to twelve, the retiring members being re-elected.

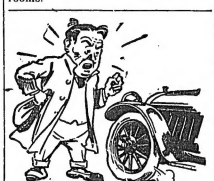

The members of the new Board are: Messrs. J. A. McPherson, J. Macdonald, W. E. Lord, A. H. McLean, N. M. Burnett, A. H. Hopworth, E. E. Graham, George W. Johnston, Jos. T. Berry, Roy Cornett, D. B. Ross, and W. T. Lake. Mr. P. E. Graham was elected secretary, Miss Pearl Ebert treasurer, and Mr. Geo. W. Muir auditor. Resolutions of appreciation were put on record for the work of the minister and his wife, the ladies, the secretary, the treasurer, the auditor, the choir, and also for the voluntary service of Mr. H. G. Stone in completing the roll of the church and the setting up of the memorial pulpit.

The ladies, under the direction of Mrs. Kirkpatrick, convened of their social committee, served refreshments that went to the spot on a cold night. Everybody agreed that the meeting was a most enjoyable and interesting one, and the congregation goes forward into the new year in good hope and spirit.

Enjoying the Winter in Old Quebec

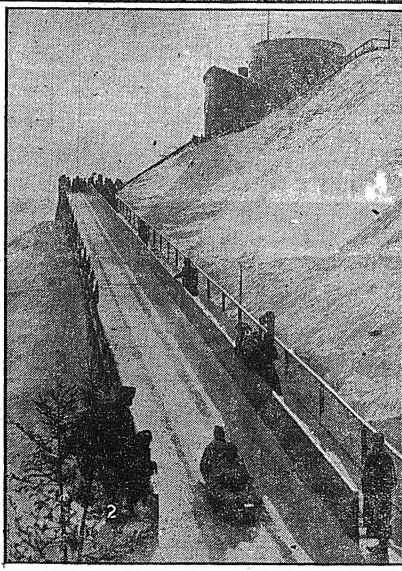

(1) Chateau Frontenac, Quebec. (2) Toboggan Slide, Citadel Hill, Quebec.

Mayor Lavigne of Quebec has announced that the official opening of the Winter Sports Season in that City will open on Tuesday, January 26th, with a grand parade of the Snowshoe and Kindred Clubs. The season will last a month, and an attractive programme of week-end races and sports has been arranged, ending with a grand carnival from February 14th to 17th.

Since Winter Sports have become as popular as those of Summer, there is no need for anyone to dread the dreariness of December, January and February. To skate rhythmically upon an open-air rink; to tramp on one's snowshoes over fields which are impassable for the ordinary pedestrian; to jump from an immense height and to land, up right and graceful, on one's side; to toboggan at the rate of an express train and most fascinating of all, perhaps, to slide on the Swiss bob-sleighs which are still a novelty on this side of the Atlantic—all this and more does Winter offer to her devotees.

Sliding and skiing require some practice before one is an adept, but sliding and snowshoeing are perfectly simple; all one needs is "the will to do, the soul to dare." Where winter's icy mantle covers the waters and spreads a blanket of snow over the land—there winter sports are at their best. In Canada, "Our Lady of the Snows," every type of winter pastime flourishes; and in Quebec, Canada's oldest City, the courses for the toboggan slide, situated on the St. Lawrence River, easily accessible by train, Quebec offers to her guests an unfeigned welcome. At the Chateau Frontenac, the huge hotel which the C.P.R. has chosen to Dufferin Terrace, the winter guest will find that his indoor comfort and outdoor sport have alike been considered. Two rinks, one in the courtyard for the skaters, the other in the summer garden for the tobogganers, are built on Dufferin Terrace, and perhaps, greatest attraction of all, the Swiss bob-sleigh—these are but a few of the inducements offered to those who love an outdoor life. The hills which surround the city make it ideal for skiing, and the broad countryside is as easy to traverse on snowshoes today, as when the Indians swept over it three hundred years ago. After a day out in the snow, one is ready to return to the hotel for an evening of dancing and other allied amusements. The Chateau Frontenac is the centre of Quebec's social life, the magnet which draws to it all that is vivacious and charming of her society. No one who has been present at her New Year's Dances in the past, and who has seen the Chateau Frontenac can ever forget it; and this season the social life seigneur—J. I. T.

In the Ancient Capital bids fair to eclipse even its own brilliant past. To the guest, the "Chambres Canadiennes" are sure to make a strong appeal. They form one of the several Period Suites in the hotel, and, as the name implies, are typically French-Canadian. In name, they are named after Jacques Cartier, Champlain, and Montcalm, heroes all, the Company has spared no effort to make them represent rooms in the manoir of a French-Canadian seigneur—J. I. T.

The Grain Drill With Double-Run Feeds

Here is the drill that plants the seed just right regardless of whether or not the grain is treated or untreated and regardless of how small a quantity you want to plant. The drill with double-run feeds that we can furnish has new features that compel accuracy and provide a wide range of adjustability. It puts every kernel of grain to work down in seed trenches of uniform width and depth. Kernels of every size and kind are delivered without being bruised or cracked. The feature that we especially want you to come in and see is the adjustable gates that make it possible to plant 48 different quantities of grain—wheat from 16 to 258 pounds per acre, and other grains in proportion. No wire reducers or other contraptions are required to reduce the quantity handled.

When you consider buying a drill, don't overlook the facts that our drill will operate on steep hillsides without axle end-play; the grain will not shift to one side, leaving part of the grain box empty; the grain box will not sag even after years of use, and any broken or worn part can be replaced easily. All these good things are the result of the gear arrangement, the three-piece floating axle that is used for driving purposes only, and the bridge construction of grain box and frame with direct support on the long, strong wheel hubs.

The next time you are in town just take a look at the Van Brunt Drill with Double-Run Feeds, (single and double discs interchangeable). Ask us about it and take home one of our booklets describing it.

The Aftermath of Action

(By Henry Chas. Suter)

AN ARGUMENT

Henry Chas. Suter.

They were standing at a street corner talking. Two men who had not been to Flanders, because they were over the age limit, but they had done their bit by supporting the Red Cross Fund, contributing of their wealth to war loans, and had given the lads great send-offs and hearty welcomes home to those who had been to Flanders. So I say they at least considered they had done their bit. Then, as they stood there at that corner, there passed a Veteran who had been through the thick and thin of the fray from beginning to end, and they naturally acknowledged him as he passed with actions of due deference.

The passing of the veteran started the argument.

"Well," said one to the other, "I guess these vets. are beginning to slip back into the old groove again."

"Old groove?" queried the other.

"Yes," responded the first, "I mean that they are forgetting the ideas of mass experience they had in the army where each individual lost himself in the rank and file of army life, and I presume they are getting back to their 'classes' and recovering their individuality again."

"Oh," exclaimed the other, "You really think that, do you?"

"Well," what do you think about it?" asked the first speaker.

"Well, my opinion is this," he responded. "It was true that the war was the great leveller and all classes were made one, clerks, mechanics, labourers, farmers, merchants, were all stripped before the doctor for examination and it seemed as though they saw themselves merely as naked humanity, being reduced to that common equation, and as they donned the common uniform they thought hence in terms of conscious unity and collective service. Each to the other henceforth became mute or dumb and they realized that the unity of classes was established through the crisis. Though there might be officers and men, a difference in rank and file, yet all were welded together into closer comradeship and they shared the dangers and discomforts together. Then they learned to trust each other and soon to love each other. All became the externals had been stripped from them and one saw men as God sees them.

They saw the essential qualities in each and looked for the "man" in each other as they learned to know a man when they saw him and valued him accordingly. Pride and possessions no longer were the distinguishing marks of men but qualities of the heart were of real value. Hence they all helped in the mental work and in the trivial task, and it was not counted dishonouring to be a glorified boy. A dark night with a skirmishing party would reveal someone's indomitable pluck, and they recognised him for it, a shortage of rations would reveal another's unselfishness, while some discomfort would call forth a huge joke from another, and the rest loved him for his irrepressible humor, and so they learned to prize in men the qualities of charity, courage, honesty and ability.

A man's worth was reckoned there by what he did and not what he had.

THE PRINCE'S MASTERLY SPEECH

"Up To Us To Lead the World"

BRITAIN NOT PLAYED OUT

The Prince of Wales spoke some thrilling words at the Mansion House, London, to a great gathering which welcomed him home from his tour in Canada and the United States.

The keynote of the speech was: "This time six years ago, before the war, there was a widespread feeling, not confined to foreign countries, that Great Britain was played out."

"Now the war has entirely put an end to that idea. Splendidly as all parts of the Empire did, the Dominions are the first to recognize that it was Great Britain that took the heaviest burden through out, and that it has been Great Britain that made the greatest sacrifices."

"What is our duty now? It is to ensure that every man and woman in the country make the best possible use of their labour and that every child born into the country may have a fair sporting chance."

"The world is feeling rather lost at the present time, and it is up to us to show the way to the other nations of the world how to overcome their difficulties. I feel sure we shall show them the way."

The speech surprised and delighted the guests. It was a masterpiece. One listener was heard to exclaim: "The British Empire has got a man. The Prince has a young reception pleasure through the great world streets to the Mansion House, before going to the audience of welcome."

THE PRINCE'S CALL

The Prince of Wales, who was greeted with rapturous cheering on rising to respond to the toast of his health, proposed by the Prime Minister, said: "I am a very happy man. I am in London, which is the centre of the Empire, and as a free man and as a Londoner, I feel that I am at the centre of the world."

I want to try to give you some idea of the wonderful experiences which I have had since you last entertained me here in July, but I feel that to do it properly I should have to be an inspired orator—may I say a 'Valedictorian'?" (Laughter and cheers.)

I feel somewhat inadequate and unequal to the attempt. (Cheer.) I shall do my best.

After visiting the loyal and ancient Colony of Newfoundland, whose fishermen served so well at sea during the war and which provided the splendid Newfoundland Regiment, I first flew to Canada at St. John, New Brunswick, and then I touched the other two maritime colonies—Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

It was not until my ship landed me in the ancient city of Quebec that I really felt that I had started on my travels in the Dominion. Both in Quebec and in Montreal, the largest city in Canada, I was enthusiastically received. I spent the longest time of all in the province of Ontario. I visited Toronto, London, Hamilton, and Windsor, all of them fine up-to-date, progressive industrial cities. I was very much impressed with seeing industries and agriculture flourishing side by side all over the country.

WORLD'S GRAIN CENTRE. I passed twice through the great prairie city of Winnipeg, which is the great grain centre of the world and is the gateway to the West, where the young, free spirit of the Westerner not only thrives but flourishes. (Cheers.) I saw something of the ranching and wheat-growing districts in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and I finally traversed the great mountain barrier of the Rockies, which brought me down to British Columbia.

I was given a very good time, as I was everywhere, in Vancouver and Victoria, and saw many flourishing industries. I must not forget the great Federal Parliament, Ottawa, where the Governor-General and Sir Robert Borden and the Canadian government gave me of their splendid hospitality.

I must say how much travelling by the Canadian Pacific Railway and the other great railways in Canada impressed me and made me realize that for those great trans-continental lines which link ocean to ocean, Canada could never have grown or developed to what it is today; it might not have even existed as a Dominion.

I was filled with admiration for what these four vigorous and energetic generations have achieved in shaping the great Dominion as we see it today, and to give it the high place in the world that it holds.

NO STRANGER IN CANADA. Now I did not feel a stranger when I first landed in Canada. I had lived for some time with the Canadian Corps on active service, and had made many friends among the troops, and felt sure I was going to see them in their own country. That was a great link and it is perhaps best described by the words of a woman who was among those who greeted me late one night—or early one morning—(laughter) at a warlike station. She said, "My husband met you at the front." So that I felt Canadian in sympathy before I even saw Canada itself, and I feel that even more intensely now, after three months in the great Dominion. (Cheers.)

I have often tried, but I fear I have rarely succeeded, to show how appreciative and grateful I am for all the kindness and hospitality shown to me, and the wonderful welcome given to me in every city I visited. I have seen the side of the world through which I passed.

I can never forget all that, and I look forward to going to Canada again. Nothing appeared to me more throughout my journey than the large number of ex-servicemen who greeted me everywhere. They even came long distances. Many of the men who attended the parades we held were badly wounded. I can never speak too strongly or too often of the great debt the Empire owes to those soldiers and sailors who fought and won in the Great War, and I want all ex-servicemen in every part of the Empire, and particularly in the Old Country, to remember me as an old comrade in arms and one who wants them in the future to look to me as a comrade in spirit.

Now I should not think much of myself. If my wonderful journey and experience had only been so much pleasure and nothing more than a holiday. It was all a great pleasure, and I enjoyed every moment of it, but it was more than that. It was an inspiring education and will influence the whole of my life, and I should like to try to tell you what I feel I have learned.

GOING TO INDIA. In the first place I have come back with a much clearer idea of what is meant by the British Empire, or, as it is often more appropriately called, the British Commonwealth. I have seen the idea of an Empire handed down from Greece and Rome was that of the mother-country ruling by daughter states which owed allegiance to her. Now we Britishers have left that obsolete idea behind a long time ago.

Our empire implies a partnership of free nations—nations living in the same system of law, pursuing the same democratic aims, and actuated by the same noblest impulses. The British Empire is thus something far grander than an empire in the old sense of the term. And it is the younger nations—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and India—who are now universally recognized as nations by the fact that they are signatories to the Peace Treaties, which they fought so magnificently to secure.

Now, among these new nations recognized by the signatory Powers at Versailles, India occupies a special position. Like the Dominions, she played a gallant part in the war, and we owe much to her soldiers and their kind and kin and all they endure for the common cause. I am looking forward to the day when I shall be able to pay a visit to that wonderful country.

The position of the self-governing Dominions is different. They are made up of peoples long trained in the management of their own affairs. They are inhabited by highly advanced and progressive democracies which have made new civilizations out of wildernesses, and they look back on their achievements with intense and legitimate pride.

Think what they have achieved in four generations. Think of their noble devotion and sacrifice in the Great War. There is no limit to the bounds to which their progress and development may some day attain. It is no exaggeration to say that the united action of the British Empire in the war was one of the features most respected by the enemy and the most effective in securing a victorious peace.

The people in the Old Country must realize that the patriotism of the Dominions is national patriotism, not mere loyalty to Great Britain. It is loyalty to their own British Institution: it is loyalty to the world-wide British system of life and government, and it is, above all, loyalty to the British Empire, of which Great Britain, like the Dominions, is only one part.

LOYALTY TO THE CROWN. I have felt the inspiration of this great idea throughout my journey, but I have also learned that the loyalty of the Dominions is, in a very special sense, loyalty to the Crown—and the Crown represents the unity of the Empire.

The King, as the constitutional Sovereign of the Empire, occupies exactly the same place in Canada and the whole of the British Empire as he does in Great Britain, and his House, although originally founded in Great Britain, belongs to all the other nations in the Commonwealth. You will understand, therefore, how proud I was when the King sent me to Canada last August, and how much it means to me that you, Mr. Lord Mayor, and your fellow-citizens in London are congratulating me on my return.

I am not so foolish as to think that these wonderful welcomes given to me are mere tributes to myself. I realize they are given to me as the King's son, and as his heir, and I recognize in them the same splendid common grandeur which makes all the whole British Empire stand and fight together in the Great War.

I feel sure that the same feeling will meet me half-way in the other Dominions. I am looking forward keenly to visiting them in the near future. I know I shall feel equally at home and have as good a time as I can in any of them, and I hope to see many more old comrades in arms.

I have so far only spoken of the British Empire. As you know, I put a short visit to the United States, where I was welcomed most warmly. It was very glad to see me, and I was very glad to see them. My visit to a foreign country should have been to that great kindred English-speaking nation, and I hope to see many more old comrades in arms.

It was a great pleasure to return President Wilson's visit to the King. I was glad to find President Wilson steadily recovering from an illness, which has affected the whole world, and I was glad to see him so well. His ideas of life resembled our own, and I was deeply touched by the demonstrations of good will that met me everywhere, particularly in Washington and New York. I hope to have another opportunity of visiting that great country of mine, and of seeing more of its splendid citizens.

Mr. Lord Mayor, I have tried to tell you about my wonderful journey and experiences. Travel opens one's eyes and clears one's brain. And my travels have made me realize the necessity and the importance of the closest personal contact and intercourse between the nations of the world.

For my own part I mean to travel throughout the Empire as much as I can. It is not so much that you learn about the world that is so valuable in travelling but what you learn about your own country. I am not so sure but what I have learned of Great Britain from the outside is the most valuable thing in the last four months.

May I tell you in a few final words what has been this time six years ago, before the war, there was a widespread feeling, not confined to foreign countries, that Great Britain was played out.

Now the war has entirely put an end to that idea. Splendidly as all parts of the Empire did, the Dominions are the first to recognize that it was Great Britain that took the heaviest burden through out, and that it has been Great Britain that made the greatest sacrifices."

CALL FOR COMMON SENSE. The people of this ancient and ancient country stand higher today in the world than they have stood before. And I wish that every man and woman in the British Isles could have heard the generous tributes to the British Empire in the war of war and sympathy, which were paid in the United States. I know that they will be proud, and, may I add, inspired, as I was, by that wholehearted praise.

A year has passed since the armistice and in many parts of the world millions of people are still torn by conflict, haggard with want, and all broken by poverty and despair. That there never was a time when the world looked so anxiously to Great Britain for an example of conduct and steadiness. I am certain, too, that the restoration of peace and happiness in the whole world will be more largely upon that than upon anything else.

We did our duty quietly and thoroughly as a nation in the war. What is our duty now? It is this—to show that world that we can work at adjusting our social, economic, and industrial problems with general fairness and sympathy, striving heartily towards one goal. That goal is happier conditions of life and to ensure that every man and woman in the country may enjoy the just proceeds of his or her labour, and that every child born into the country may have a fair sporting chance. (Applause.)

Our present problems will never be solved by hatred or by violence; they will only be solved by common sense and, above all, by good will. ("Heavens!")

The world is feeling rather lost at the present time, and it is up to us, the British nation, and to all nations of the Empire to show the way. I feel sure that we will show that way and that we can. (Cheers.)

RULES FOR FARMERS. Since it has become the fashion for working men to name the conditions under which they will work, here are some suggested rules for farmers:

1. Hereafter the farm working day shall be eight hours with two hours off for dinner.

2. No farmer shall work more than twelve hours in any one week unless he gets extra pay for the overtime.

3. Extra work shall be paid for by the public, milking cows and stalling hogs before 8 o'clock in the morning or after 5 o'clock in the evening shall be counted as double time.

4. The price of all farm products shall be fixed by the farmers. Wheat shall sell for not less than $20 per bushel and hogs for not less than $40 per hundred. For every increase of 20 per cent, every six months until the farmers decide they want a larger advance.

5. Collective bargaining shall be the rule and farmers shall fix the prices of all they buy and sell.

6. Flax tobacco shall be supplied free to all farmers and paid for out of the public treasury.

7. Farmers' wives shall have the same working hours as the men with two hours off each day for fancy work.

8. Proper sanitation conditions shall be provided, therefore the public must do such jobs as cleaning pig pens, milking kicking cows, driving bawling mules, and such other work as farmers do not care to do.

9. Don't these rules sound about as reasonable as some that are demanded by some of the labor unions?—Harvard Courier.

A POOR TALKER. The evening party was over, and most of the guests had gone. As one young man took leave of his hostess, the lady said:

"I'm sorry you found Miss Biggie poor conversationalist!" exclaimed the guest. "She's absolutely the best. Why the only thing she said to me the entire evening was 'No, and I had to propose to her to get that out of her!'"

VALUE OF EGG LAYING CONTEST. (Experimental Farms Note)

There is at the present time a great wave of interest and enthusiasm in poultry production sweeping over practically the whole world, and particularly the British Empire. Unhappily the necessity for increased production of all foods has been a great factor in this awakened interest, but before this necessity arose the wave had begun, so that it but increased rather than started it.

While there are a great many factors more or less responsible for the awakened interest, the greatest is undoubtedly the laying contests. The primary value of laying contests undoubtedly was the advertising and stimulus they gave to the breeders who entered their flocks, but the greatest value to the poultry was in the public attention that they have attracted to the production end of poultry keeping and the establishing of confidence in records made under public supervision.

The shows and exhibitions that have been held in the past aroused the attention and roused interest from the love of beauty of form and feather, but with the coming of the Laying Contests the general public—the keen business man and the dissatisfied city dweller—has realized that there was a business that was more than a fad, a hobby; that here was a business capable of returning a good profit on investment or a good independent living.

The man of means invested in a farm, employs an experienced poultry man and goes into the business. The city worker has not sufficient capital for this, so he starts a small back-yard flock, learns how to handle it with profit, gradually expands, looking forward to the time when he can stop his city work and depend entirely on poultry for a living.

It is this awakening of public interest in poultry production that has so far been of first importance, but while this, no doubt, will continue ultimately the greatest value will come from the establishment of Records of Performance that will be above reproach.

In the past, records have been published that were solely under the supervision of the owner. Many of these needed to be greater care production will be opened in a way that has never been possible before.

With a view to stimulating interest in poultry production, the Dominion Experimental Farms have established an official record for greater egg production. The first of these was started at Charlottetown, P.E.I. on November 1st, 1918, and created so much interest in that province that on the following November 1st six other contests were started as follows:

The Canadian Egg Laying Contest at Ottawa with fifty pens competing. Federal contests of twenty pens each at Nappan, N.S., Cap Rouge, Que., Brandon, Man., Indian Head, Sask., and Leithbridge.

These latter, while not strictly confined to the provinces in which they are held, are intended to be more or less of a provincial nature, while the Contest at Ottawa is international in character.

It is expected that next year not only will the capacity of the present contests be increased, but that other contests will be established in other districts throughout Canada.

OUR NATIONAL ECONOMIC PROBLEM.

The following interesting extract from an article by Mr. E. W. Bontie, president of the C. P. R. appeared recently in the Montreal Gazette:—"So much for the manner in which the transportation machinery of the country is carrying out its obligations to the Canadian producer. Other aspects of the transportation problem are equally satisfactory. There are many people who look upon Canadian Railways as custodians of the national wealth, and who regard them as a source of national pride. As a simple and inexorable in its sale of losses and its contribution to a railway as it may be to a corner grocer, is to these people unthinkable. The Canadian producer does not seem to them to be no public is it more important than to the Canadian public that the goods of the country be shipped in safety to the world of trade and investment should be careful of the goods of the country. To this, however, who understand these things clearly and who view the matter from the standpoint of broad public interest, it is at once apparent that the Canadian public pays a very low rate for the transportation of its goods, and that a time is rapidly approaching when it is to be made less desirable to investors than almost any other kind of industrial security. Railway rates will either have to go up, or railway operating costs will go down. Such persons recognize that it is not because the situation of the railways is an easy one that certain companies have been able to show net earnings of $1,000,000 per year. It is because the actual cash invested in the industry—but because in the past of capital and the railways have been, as they are to-day, courageous persons willing to supply the means for constructive enterprises in which no one but themselves had faith and courage, too, that the railways have been able to resourceful and loyal business men, assisted by staffs filled with the spirit of pride and devotion to their work. This, indeed, is the thing which has made it possible for Canada's railways to function successfully during the war without making anything like the demands that foreign roads—less efficient in serving their community, yet earning the same rates and paying the same wages—have made upon their public exchequers. I do not believe that this strain upon the railways and this tendency to weaken the general reputation of Canadian Railway securities should continue. The servant, after all, is worthy of his hire, and railway capital is not less worthy a servant than other forms of capital whose earnings have not been so consistently depressed."

The net earnings during the war years, of these companies which showed net earnings, would have been much lower had the Canadian railways been making expenditures for maintenance which circumstances would have justified, but which conditions prevented during that period. These arrears have now to be made up. During 1919 the Canadian Pacific paid 70,000 tons of steel rail. In place of, say, 2,000,000 tons, worth $4.00 in 1914, the Canadian Pacific paid 4,150,000 tons at 85c per ton. The sensational advance in the rate of railway wages well known. Further advance may be necessary within the very near future, as indicated by discussions in the United States. The price of coal for locomotives was $3.00 in 1913. Now it is $4.77. The cost of hauling an average freight car (freight or passenger) one mile has risen from $1.00 in 1913 to $2.04 in 1918. It is higher today. The operating expenses of one mile of line in 1915 were $4,152, in 1918, $7,216, and today they are even greater. On the other hand, railway rates, taking all classes of revenue together, have advanced scarcely 10 per cent. A venture to say no other industry in the Dominion can show such moderation."
